Paper works Step by Step Time required: 2 hours Level: Beginner Artist: H  lene Jourdain Create a geometric paper design with the help of the template provided, a craft that requires detailed cutting and that produces a slight 3D effect. List of materials: Download the template. Print it onto the reverse side of the Canson  Vivaldi rose floupaper (on the white side). You can personalise your creation by going for an alternative combination of colours. Cut out the printed pattern using a precision cutter. You can cut free-hand for smaller and rounded shapes. For slightly longer, straight cuts, on the other hand, it is advised that you use a ruler. Tip: There is no point folding back the tabs of paper prior to having completed all of the cutting, as they may get in your way as you continue cutting. Certain areas must be cut out completely. In order to achieve clean edges when you fold back all of the tabs, lightly run along the folds with the blade, with the help of a ruler. There is no point tracing along the folds of the leaves and the rose, which will be slightly more flowing shapes. For the leaf designs, once the oval shape has been cut out lightly run along the two straight lines with the cutter, from the tip of the leaf to the 2 points on its base. Stick the tabs of all of the circles and triangles. Only the foliage and central rose will remain raised. Achieve a clean fold on the triangles, from one end to the other, pressing down with a tool or your fingernails to produce a secure bond. To create volume in the leaves, straighten them out again and pinch along the two folds Finally, bend the triangle of the rose using a fine, round tool, such as the end of a paintbrush, going from the inside towards the outside. Add small spots of glue to the back of your work (on the pink side of the sheet) and stick your openwork sheet onto the second fluorescent sheet. Delicately life the corners of the pink sheet and apply a line of glue to the back of each corner, then stick down. You can frame your creations (without glass to as to preserve the 3D effect), or alternatively, this technique can also be used in card making.   1996-2014, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates Paper cutting has a long and colourful history, it originated in China where the very first paper cutting art discovered was dated from around the 6th century! Things have come a long way since then but the principles still remain the same. It has been described as a very mindful process, and once you find your rhythm will be very therapeutic. In saying that, it might take a bit of practice and probably a lot of torn paper before you can get into the really detailed paper cutting, but the outcomes are very worth the practice and time.If you are a beginner to this craft it can be very helpful to start with a paper cutting template, rather than trying to go freehand, it gives you some guidance and there are some very creative templates available. We have chosen our favourite paper cutting templates for you to browse right here, some are free and others can be purchased from designers, we have included a mixture of difficulty levels - so whether you are new to paper cutting or a dab hand already, we're sure you'll find something you love.What is paper cutting?Paper cutting is a traditional method of cutting a design by hand into a single sheet of paper, originating from China. Since its beginnings, it has moved across the world adapting to a huge variety of cultural styles. The design possibilities are endless for paper cutting, from simple designs to huge intricate pieces.Tools for paper cuttingYou'll need a sharp blade - we'd recommend this Soft Grip Blade (just remember to store them safely because they are very sharp)A cutting mat to protect surfaces (A3 is a good size) - try this ANSIO cutting matCutting card - anything between 120gms-160gms is usually fine, but just find what works for you and your blades, bear in mind thinner card is more prone to tearingThe last thing you'll need is a template - and that's where we come in, keep reading for paper cutting template inspiration!If you want to purchase everything at once check out this paper cutting beginners kit on Etsy, it contains everything you need to get started, plus some amazing templates. If you like the look of paper cutting, but don't want to do this by hand, consider investing in a digital cutting machine like a Scan N Cut or a Cricut machine with our guide.How to do paper cuttingAs mentioned for beginners it's helpful to use a template when you are getting started. When you begin cutting it's always best to start from the middle of a design and work your way outwards, avoid jumping around the design as the paper can weaken this way. Slowly begin to cut away your design, and ensure the pieces you cut away are moved to one side - cutting through them below the design can damage your blade. There are two main types of paper cutting:Positive cuts vs negative cuts for paper cuttingPositive cuts - meaning cutting away space around the design (the outside cuts). Check out design number 1 on the list as an example.Negative cuts - which means cutting away the design itself from the paper (the inside lines) - check out design number 3 on the list as an example.Finishing your paper cutting designThere are many things you can do with your designs once completed, they often look lovely simply mounted on some contrasting card and framed. You can also create greetings cards from them, in particular, they are well suited to wedding invitations or congratulations cards thanks to their often floral and delicate designs.If you're really keen on cardmaking take a look at our best printers for card making, and if you're in need of a glue gun find the best glue gun for cardmaking and crafting.
